

A GRAND CELEBRATION.

The Twenty-second Anniversary of the A. O. U. W. Hand-somely Remembered.

A Fine Street Parade—Over Six Hundred Members of the Order in the Procession.

The Entertainment at Association Park—The Feast and Ball—Eloquent Addresses.

The celebration of the twenty-second anniversary of the birth of the order known as the A. O. U. W., yesterday, was an event which reflected great honor upon that institution and of which the city of Sedalia may well be proud.

The parade in the evening was a surprise to all who were not posted with regard to the numerical strength of the Workmen in the Queen City. Nearly 700 men were in line and all but about 100 of the marchers belonged to the four Sedalia lodges. There was also another surprise about the parade and it lay in the fact that the representative men of all classes of laborers, including bankers and clerks, merchants and their salesmen, railroad officials and their employees, lawyers, judges, artisans, mechanics and in fact representatives of every branch of industry. In that procession marched the blood and sinew of modern progress and culture, the brain and brawn of Pettis county. The A. O. U. W. were proud of the procession and those outside of the order could not help but rejoice with them as they viewed the grand display made.

The line of march and the order of procession, as announced in yesterday's Bazaar was followed out to the letter and does not require repetition. There were three floats in the line which are deserving of much well merited praise. All were pictures of the secret and open work of the order. The first exhibited a sick-chamber. In the bed was a man stricken down by disease and by his side was seated a brother who was following out the doctor's instructions in regard to the administration of medicine. At the foot of the bed was a watchman—a Workman—waiting for an opportunity to relieve in any manner the distress of his sick friend and brother. All over the picture stood out in big bold letters, larger than if actually painted there, Friendship, Fraternity, Love.

The next float was a home scene. The father and head of the family had departed from earth to another world and left behind him a widow and a household of children. After his death his brother Workmen stepped in and provided and cared for wife and children. The picture disclosed a house filled with comfort; the mother surrounded by her children clad in warm garments. The boys and girls were enjoying a profitable season of study and varied amusement, while the mother's eyes were gladdened at the happiness of the fatherless children. The dullest on-looker would have said that meant "charity"—it was a striking exemplification of one of the cardinal principles of the order.

The contrast to the last picture was shown in the float that followed. Some man who had not been wise enough to become a Workman had left behind him a widow and family of children. The woman was toiling over the tub while her ragged brood of hoodlums were raising merry shoop instead of earning their bread and butter. The contrast was striking—and produced, without doubt, the effect which was intended.

During the parade the M., K. & T. and Sedalia Military bands furnished excellent marching music. An incident worthy of note is worth recording. On Main street the Sedalia Rifles were drawn up in line and as the Military passed before them the soldier boys heartily cheered them and as if by a concerted arrangement the applause continued as they marched through Osage, third and Ohio streets. It was a compliment well bestowed.

The hotel at Association Park was entirely too small to comfortably contain the members of the order and their families but in spite of the jam everyone had a most pleasant time, the entire programme affording a season of pleasure which was highly enjoyable. The hotel hall was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting and the dining room was handsomely arranged by Mr. Lupe and tables were loaded down with the choicest delicacies that any chef could provide.

John Lomasney acted as master of ceremonies and the hall programme was announced by him in a few pretty remarks and then he introduced Grand Overseer Mont Carnes to the audience. Mr. Carnes delivered a short address of welcome to the visiting brethren, after which Prof. Gregg's orchestra played an entrancing overture. The Sedalia Glee club consisting of Mint Johns, George McNeely, Howard Stryker and J. D. McCarty rendered most beautifully "Rocking on the Billows."

Grand Overseer Carnes then introduced to the audience the Hon. Simon S. Bass, of St. Louis, who delivered a most eloquent address on "Our Fraternity."

The speaker in his preface said: "I desire to say that I have been highly complimented by being called to Sedalia to address you upon this occasion. I am heartily pleased that I came here to be with you. I have been at many parades and processions of Workmen and I can truthfully say I never before saw anything to equal your parade in Sedalia this evening. It was a credit to our order and a credit to the Queen City of Missouri. (Applause.) I was surprised at the progress the city of Sedalia has made in the last ten years, and I noted to-night the strength of our order here. I was not surprised, for in a city of progress and beauty, of wealth and culture, the A. O. U. W. is bound to flourish." Degrading a moment, the speaker paid a handsome compliment to John Lomasney and his co-laborers on the several committees.

"This is," said the speaker, simply a meeting of the members of one order to celebrate the founding of the A. O. U. W. twenty-two years ago in the granite hills of Pennsylvania. John Jordan Upchurch, a toiler feeling the oppression borne by the laborer of his time, gathered around him a handful of co-laborers and instituted Jefferson Lodge No. 1, A. O. U. W. That man Upchurch must have been inspired for he founded an institution which is to-day one of the noblest orders on the face of the earth which is devoted exclusively to the benefit of workingmen."

"This order is just twenty-two years old and has just received its majority. From the inception of the order it has been growing steadily although at its birth it was not led with a silver spoon. We number to-day 250,000 workingmen, the pick and choice of the cities and towns in which lodges exist. The A. O. U. W. is a pillar to the state, a right hand to the church, and by the high standard of morality which it establishes it assists the church in working for the right. You will find and mechanical marching for charity to mankind."

"New York state has 30,000 members of the A. O. U. W., the state of Missouri has 23,000. And I wish to say this, if all the lodges in this state would display the same fidelity and faithfulness as the lodges of Sedalia, it would be but a short time until Missouri would be far ahead of New York and leave them far in the rear with little trouble."

"The beauty of the A. O. U. W. is that we have no legal contests no litigations, we always pay our benefit in full. There are no insurance company dodges to escape payment. The object of our order which we cherish is to provide for our widows and orphans and not to leave them to the cold charity of the world."

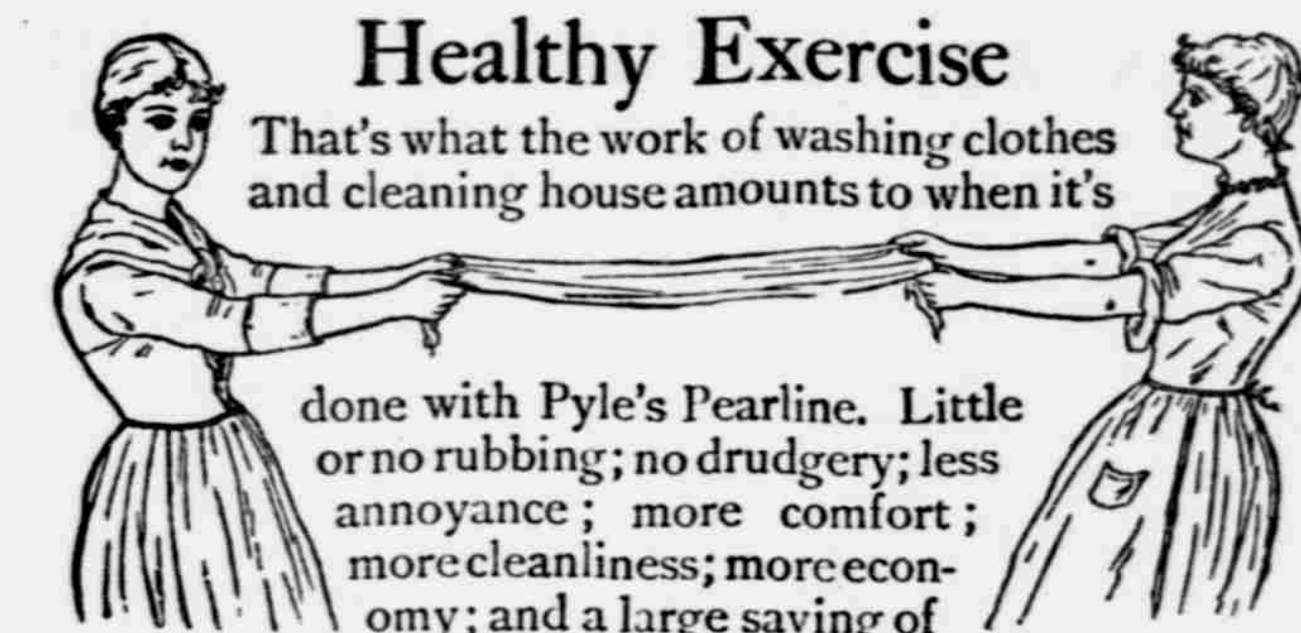

In conclusion, after illustrating the workings of the order in a most happy manner, the speaker said: "To the members of the Sedalia lodges allow me to bid you God speed in your work. I believe the jurisdiction here will show greater development in the future, as in the past, than in any other portion of the state."

The musical selections by the Wallace family were a delightful feature of the programme.

Mrs. V. P. Hart and daughters, Lela and May rendered "Phantom Footsteps" in a beautiful manner, the trio of voices being in most pleasing accord. They received their vociferous encore and their second number, "Calvary" brought forth another storm of applause.

Prof. Gwylne Miles, the baritone soloist, has a wonderfully strong and even voice. He sang "The Bald Jack Tar" in a most admirable manner and in response to an encore, doubly merited, beautifully rendered "The Midship Mite."

Hon. Walter F. McEntire, of St. Louis, a most accomplished and cultured gentleman, and a successful and brilliant lawyer was introduced and delivered an address on "The Objects and Principles of the A. O. U. W." During Mr. Bass' address he was presented with a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers and Mr. McEntire seized upon the incident to open his address with an humorous introduction, telling how the boys had rung in one bouquet three times on him and when he went to gather up his laurels there was only one little bunch of roses for him to carry off in triumph. In speaking of the secret work of the order he said, "There are no boiling cauldrons, no coffins, skull and crossbones, but simply a plain work, and the only obligation is a solemn promise to help the brotherhood, their wives and children. The speaker delivered an eloquent address which was interposed with witty stories and humorous illustrations. He made a most excellent impression and was loudly cheered at the conclusion of a beautiful oration. In his history of the order he paid a handsome tribute to the founder of the order by saying, "In 1869 at Meadville, Pa., John Jordan Upchurch instituted the first lodge. His heart was full of sympathy for his fellow workmen who were oppressed and he founded the order of A. O. U. W. He builded better than he dreamed of and reared for himself a monument more lasting than granite and piled around his memory a wreath built with the joyful and thankful tears of thousands of widows and orphans—a diadem more precious to his soul than all the wealth of all the continents."

The purpose of the order are to break down all social barriers and to establish a social plane upon which all honest men and their wives can meet. The zither selections by Dr. Emil Menhl were finely rendered, the music being wonderfully sweet and entrancing. The doctor received a well earned encore.

J. D. McCarty's tenor solo, "That is Love," came last on the programme, but it was one of the several fine features which made up the enjoyable entertainment. Miss Dolly O'Connor, who presided at the piano during the evening is deserving of much praise. The feast followed the hall entertainment and was a royal banquet catered, Stephen T. Lupe. The grand ball came next in order and to the merry music, furnished by Gregg's full orchestra, the happy dancers tripped the light fantastic through sixteen numbers and to the finale promenade "Home, Sweet Home" at two o'clock in the morning.

DIED.

WHEELER—The infant child of Elias Wheeler died of whooping cough at its parents residence in Beaman, at 8:30 o'clock yesterday evening.

The funeral of the deceased took place this afternoon at the Wheeler residence and the interment was in the Beaman cemetery.

CATTLE BREEDERS.

An Association to be Organized Next Spring if Possible.

The project of forming a cattle breeders' association, which took form early in September, has been received with universal favor and the plan will probably be put into effect by June or July next," said Mitchell T. Lane of Cheyenne, Wyo., who is at the Southern. "The necessity for some sort of organization has long been apparent, but there have been two great difficulties in the way.

CAUSES FOR LOW PRICES.

"In the first place, the owners of range cattle have been terribly crippled by the fall in the price of beef, and in order to keep their heads above water and to meet the notes that nearly all had out, they have been obliged to sacrifice their stock and sell it for what it would bring. The second difficulty that was met with was the want of harmony between the men who owned the great plains ranches, and the farmers who raised cattle in connection with their other business. The farmers have always been jealous of the range men, believing that their cattle had depressed the market, and were not at all disposed to see them get into trouble, as they thought that if they were sold out the business would pass into the hands of the corn feeders and prices would go up. Several efforts have been made to form a combine, but all have been unsuccessful, owing largely to the position taken by the farmers. Contrary to the general supposition a majority of the cattle marketed in the west comes from the farms, the ranges sending less than 40 per cent.

A STRONG ALLIANCE.

"Small breeders see clearly now that disaster to the range means disaster to them. They are of the opinion that when the owners failed the ranges would be abandoned, but this has not proved to be the case. There are now more cattle on the plains than ever before, the only difference being that the owners of the beef are formerly obliged to do. This has the effect of depressing the price of corn-fed beef, as it will only command a small advance over the tariff paid for grass-fed steers. At last the farmers have awakened to the necessity of joining hands with range men, and for the last three weeks I have been engaged in obtaining the signatures of large breeders in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Kentucky to an agreement to join the association as soon as it is organized. In only three or four cases have I met with a refusal. The project is to prorate the number of cattle to be sent to market by any one owner, and to put an end to the practice of rushing all the stock to market within a month or two. Heretofore nine-tenths of the range cattle have been sold between the middle of June and the first of September, and while the farm stock has been more evenly distributed, the greater part of it has been sold at that time. The consequence was that the market was flooded, the beef bosses in alliance with the stockyard men kept down the price, and bought very cheap, in many cases sending the cattle back to the very farmers from which they were taken until they were needed.

DISTRIBUTING SALES.

"When the organization now projected goes into effect this will be put a stop to. Strong capitalistic backing has been secured, and in case a breeder has to sell his cattle at a certain time, an advance can be made to him, and the stock marketed at such time as the directors of the company deem best. In this way the beef can be sold as it is used, a certain proportion every month, and will not be rushed to the market all at once. A further benefit of the alliance between the range men and the farmers lies in the fact that the grass-fed beef can be sent to the farmers for a month or two, taking the place of the corn-fed stock that goes to market. By this means the round-up, which takes place immediately after branding, when there are plenty of men on the range, will not be interfered with. What we shall be obliged to have is stock yards of our own, and one will certainly be located here, as in Chicago we would meet with too much opposition. This is the natural center for both the Southwestern and Southeastern cattle trade, and the new association cannot fail to greatly benefit St. Louis."

A DOUBLE WEDDING.

A Couple Hunt For Some One to Tie the Knot to Bind Them For Life.

A young man from Otterville came to Sedalia this morning and brought with him a young lady, who wished to become his wife. The prospective bridegroom was James E. Spencer and he rustled around town to find a justice of the peace to unite him in marriage to Ada F. Crawford. He visited the office of Judge Milo Blair twice, and not finding him in, a Bazaar reporter took the Benedict in tow and steered him over to Judge Fisher's office. The judge read the marriage license over very carefully, and finding it to be properly made out, requested the parties to prepare for the ceremony. Spencer removed his hat and the bride took off her ulster. Fisher, in a most beautiful manner tied the knot, which both promised should last until death parted them. In the audience was Officer Garrell and he could not let slip an opportunity to do a good turn. Advancing to Mr. Spencer he took him by the hand and said, "Mr. Spencer I have been waiting two hours to see you happily married, allow me to congratulate you. In commemoration of the event allow me to present you and your wife with a bagful of popcorn." Gorrell reached into his capacious overcoat pocket and drew forth two bags of popcorn, which he had been carrying around for two weeks. Talk about duty after the above named parties were married James H. Mullen of Clinton, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Ray of this city came into Justice Fisher's office and requested him to perform the official act that would make them husband and wife. Justice Fisher dropped a case which he was busily engaged in and in the twinkling of an eye made Mrs. Ray the lawful wife of Mr. Mullen.

Inhuman Treatment.

La Porte, Ind., October 23.—Jos. A. Stador, a youth, was found dead recently near his home in Lake county. An investigation by the coroner shows that death resulted from the most inhuman treatment on the part of a man named Wasser, with whom young Stador was working. The boy was struck with a heavy piece of wood over the head and shoulders and afterwards dragged into the house, where he was chained to a lounge and kept without food for several days. The coroner's verdict will result in the arrest and trial of Wasser for murder.

A Method of Treating Disease. Hospital Remedies.

What are they? There is a new departure in the treatment of disease. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America, and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatment of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh was procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism and nervous debility.

This new method of "one remedy for one disease" must appeal to the common sense of all sufferers, many of whom have experienced the ill effects, and thoroughly realized the absurdity of the claims of Patent Medicines which are guaranteed to cure every ill out of a single bottle, and the use of which as statistics prove, has ruined more stomachs than alcohol. A circular describing these new remedies is sent free on receipt of stamp to pay postage by Hospital Remedy Company, Toronto, Canada, sole proprietors.
